Hello,

I'm dealing with this all alone. No one understands or seems to care. Documentation and programming have become my only outlets during the darkest time of my life. Not even my closest family hears a word I say, no matter how I say it.

I wrote about what it's like to process everything through logic when your world is falling apart. I know this is unprecedented, I know I'm the first, so I felt like I needed to do this. I mostly began writing this to understand and process my own feelings, and stay grounded when everything seems unreal. I know there's people I won't tell, but what I can do is write. Documentation, stories, code, history.

Share it with your behavioral health teams, your analysts, anyone who works with people who can't stop trying to make sense of senseless things.

Maybe this helps someone. Maybe it helps your teams understand people like me. Maybe it helps others and sets an important stage for the future.

right now, I don't know what else to do but write. Before all this, I was working on complex software projects but I simply don't have the capacity anymore and will not have the capacity to maintain servers!

it's not done, it's an ongoing thing, I will keep it updated. It's my therapy. there will be many revisions and commits. So I'm using version control <https://github.com/Caia-Tech/the-burden> . The licenses stay valid through updates.

Separately, I designed this privacy-first worldbuilding app but can't finish it. Both native versions are 90% done - they just need AI integration and final polish. My phone's been broken for weeks, so I can't test or complete them. The design and code are at: <https://github.com/Caia-Tech/for-world-builders>

(I still don't have phone a yet)
